WDCR Slates Green Up Week Activities

WDCR General Manager William Downall today announced plans for activities connected with May 1, Green Up Day in Vermont. "Our purpose is to help promote the Green Up Day activities in Vermont, and hopefully stimulate similar activity in New Hampshire", Downall said.

Planned activities by the 1000 watt station include devotion of the entire week of April 26th to environmental issues, with speakers from governmental agencies and conservation groups appearing on The Noon Hour, and Tritown Talkback programs. "Ecofacts", short "commercials for the environment" will also be scheduled through the week.

On Saturday May 1, WDCR staff members will join Upper Valley residents in cleanup projects. So far contributions of trucks have been received from the Town of Hanover, Dartmouth College, and the Trumbull Nelson Construction Company. Other donations of vehicles, and tools are being solicited by the station, which will coordinate work on several projects in the Upper Valley.

According to General Manager Downall, "This program is a logical followup to last year's award-winning Earth Day program. This year, we are trying to provide more information on local problems and their long-range solutions, so that massive one-day cleanups will become less necessary."

WDCR is the only student-operated commercial AM station in the country, serving the Upper Connecticut Valley area 24 hours a day from Hanover, New Hampshire.
